Protecting Your Income

Father McGivney faced a major struggle in 1882. How could one determined man in St. Mary's Church possibly keep up with the needs of the families around him, who were under constant stress after losing their breadwinner?

Remember, conditions back then were quite different than they are today. Hard working Catholic men faced long hours in dangerous, unsanitary jobs. Deaths and injuries were common. Catholics were excluded from unions, and faced other discrimination. There were no advocate groups speaking on their behalf, no social welfare programs providing assistance in the case of an emergency. Today, there are laws and organizations, like the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) in the U.S. or the Centre for Occupational Health and Safety in Canada, that protect workers from the situations that were prevalent in 1882, and there are programs designed to provide temporary assistance to a family in need, if a tragedy occurs.

While most jobs are safer now, accidents, injuries, and illnesses that can impact your ability to work still happen. Most, in fact, do not happen on the jobsite or place of employment. Did you know that a recent study revealed that more than 95 percent of the long-term disability claims on file were not work related?

The "loss" of the breadwinner does not have to mean that person's death; it can also mean the loss of the breadwinner's income. Consider that loss for a moment. How would your family fare if a source of income suddenly stopped? Could a dual-income family manage on one income stream? What about young families with a working father and a mother who cares for the children? What if his income halted due to an accident or illness?

That's where a personally-owned disability income insurance product, like Income armor, comes into play. It can offer valuable income replacement in the event of an injury or illness. If you have a job, you cannot afford to not know about this coverage. Please contact fraternal counselor SK John Casey at (514) 952-1891 or jcasey@johncaseymarketing.com for more information.
